

Most of us, I suppose, when we go on holiday make haste to buy a local map and local or regional guide. When we move house we probably purchase the map, unless we know the locality well, but guides scarcely exist for many places. Marvellous though they are, how often do we find Michelin Green Guides wanting on discovery of some small but lovely village?

No surprise then that the 2002 Village Appraisal identified such a gap for our small but lovely village of Woldingham.

So here it is – the Woldingham Information Pack. Whilst it should be of particular interest to newcomers to Woldingham, even those of us who have lived here for some years have learned much from reading the pages.

Putting it together was not an easy task and a considerable debt is due to those members of the Woldingham Association Council who freely gave significant effort in creating this Information Pack for the benefit of us all.
